GREECE-CYPRUS: Cypriot President Makarios is scheduled to visit Athens tomorrow, presumably to sort out his differences with the Greek regime regarding talks between the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities. The talks, now in their fourth year, have been bogged down over the degree of local autonomy to be given the Turkish Cypriot minority. Makarios has refused to accept Athens' demands that he compromise. The Greeks also intend to discuss the Cypriot question directly with the Turks later this month.

SWITZERLAND: Bern's announcement yesterday of its intention to establish diplomatic relations with Hanoi is a move it has probably long wished to make to balance its long-standing relations with Saigon. The Swiss probably do not anticipate serious foreign repercussions from their action. With its traditional, neutral image enhanced, Bern apparently hopes to play some role in the settlement of the war, perhaps on the prisoner of war issue.
